

A felt book jacket

You'll be blessed by the whole family if you make this cover, with a pocket for a magnifying glass, for a family book, which has small print, such as a dictionary, atlas, or again, the telephone book. Looking things up becomes a pleasure, even if the light is poor, or you're in a hurry, or you can't find your glasses.

Directions: Make a jacket from felt, as in making the jacket for the telephone book.

Sew on the front a piece of felt, in a contrasting color, big enough to hold a magnifying glass. (Include a glass, if you can, and if the family hasn't one.)

Pink around the edges, for trim. If you've included a glass, attach a tassel to its handle, for a pleasing effect.
