

If you have a lamppost on your front lawn, what could be a more natural way for it to appear at Christmas time than as a giant candle? All you have to do is to surround the post from base to lamp with corrugated cardboard or chicken wire, then cover the tubelike enclosure with bright red or green foil or oilcloth. Or, if the weather is really rugged, you can cut a strip of red or green linoleum to the height needed to form the candle tube. Spray the top of the candle with gold glitter. The "flame," of course, will be the lamplight itself, softened by surrounding it with a cloud of angel hair,

A lamppost becomes a magnificent Christmas candle